

Abstract

Disclosed is a method for automatically populating contact information fields of a contact information database, such as for instance an electronic address book, without requiring an individual to manually enter data in same. Only the individual is required to be a member of the service and the individual's data remains secure as the method does not require provision of the individual's address book to a central storage system.